India is a country known for its diversity. India is also known for its government leadership, public servants who are pushing social reforms for public welfare. Central & state government organisations working for accelerating peaceful growth in all regions across the country. All countries, government organisations worldwide now share a common goal for sustainable development backed by UN - Promote peaceful and inclusive societies for sustainable development, provide access to justice for all and build effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels. It also includes significantly reducing all forms of different violence, death rates everywhere. Ending exploitation, trafficking and all forms of violence against and torture of children. Promoting the rule of law at the national and international levels and ensure equal access to justice for all. By 2030, significantly reduce illicit financial and arms flows, strengthen the recovery and return of stolen assets and combat all forms of organised crime. Substantially reduce corruption and bribery in all their forms. Developing effective, accountable and transparent institutions at all levels. Ensuring responsive, inclusive, participatory and representative decision-making at all levels. Broadening and strengthening the participation of developing countries in the institutions of global governance. By 2030, providing legal identity for all, including birth registration. Ensure public access to information and protect fundamental freedoms, in accordance with national legislation and international agreements. Strengthen relevant national institutions, including through international cooperation, for building capacity at all levels, in particular in developing countries, to prevent violence and combat terrorism and crime. Promote and enforce non-discriminatory laws and policies for sustainable development. It is also important all women need to be able to turn to fair, effective institutions to access justice and essential services. Without these, instability and injustice spread, and discrimination is perpetuated. In both developing and developed countries, however, a variety of institutions continue to fail women and girls, especially through impunity for gender-based violence. Peace, stability, human rights and effective governance, based on the rule of law, are central to the realization of child rights, and a prerequisite for sustainable development. Governments can offer the first line of protection: birth registration systems give children claim to vital social services, equitable justice systems and other forms of child protection. No child should ever be exposed to violence. Yet, globally, millions of children continue to face violence in their homes, schools, communities and online. Violence takes many forms: emotional, physical and sexual. Witnessing or experiencing violence erodes a child's health, well-being and potential. Government of India is committed to transparent and accountable government of, for, and by the people: the good way for nations to realize lasting peace, prosperity, and human dignity. Central & state government of India support strengthening the rule of law and support for human rights defenders. Government organisations partnering with national and international organisations who share belief that the rules-based order and respect for human rights must remain the foundation for global peace and prosperity. Meeting the global targets for peace, justice and strong institutions earlier agreed in UN Global Government Agenda 2030 requires partnerships and multi-stakeholder approaches, underpinned by a shared evidence-base for action. Central & state governments in India taking significant steps to increase communal harmony, citizens in urban and rural regions across India must also take steps and work for peaceful nation building. Ministry of Education will play significant role by collaborating stakeholders of all the states to increase education rate in urban and rural regions, every child must get an opportunity for skill development, education.
