International Peace Policy, International Development & Cooperation Policy are the key areas which are good for social welfare and global peace. It is important to create the competitiveness and flexibility, economy of every country needs to thrive in an interdependent, fast-changing global geopolitical landscape. Government organisations share a common vision to strengthen their economy and institutions, innovative businesses, educated and skilled population and secure borders. Good diplomacy, peaceful partnerships with a strong vision for growth will be good. International borders need to be secured with a set of rules. Stepping up to support a more resilient global geo-politics is essential. International cooperation for software, agriculture, education programs, space satellites and other areas set by the United Nations are already creating great value and they will continue to add value in the growth of every country. Foreign policy of every Government must be strengthened on the basis of the values of citizens, including political, economic and religious freedom, liberal democracy, the rule of law, racial and gender equality and mutual respect. Government institutions having a structure of impartiality gains strong public confidence and is balanced with clear accountability. Every Government must ensure that national decision-making is transparent and government institutions remain free from foreign interference. Government decisions must be based on national interests for empowering every citizen, literate or illiterate doesn't matter – education empowers even the weakest citizen in the society and makes them more relevant for their country, their people. Every country does have a set of political leaders, those who are having positive vision for the country, citizens and global growth also those who may have a vision with difference, it is important to see what is good for global citizens with shared values. Global stability, digital literacy, economic growth, systematic way for problem solving are restructuring and strengthening global geo-politics. Dr. S Jaishankar is known for his wisdom, peaceful work with global government organisations. In international arena globalisation with interdependence of countries is visible, commerce becomes increasingly interdependent with production of different goods, raw material availability, manufacturing lines, changing global consumption patterns, global issues need to be solved by the joint efforts of all the countries. Wisdom of diplomats must be used for peacekeeping and resources of the country must be used for national and international growth.
